Dashing through the snow to the home of Kris and his lovely wife Kandy, we find them decking the halls on an otherwise silent night. Filling orders of toys that will bring joy to the world, Kris fears that a gift of a baby brother for a young child in the midwest would leave the parents asking, "what child is this?". Meanwhile, Kandy is in the kitchen preparing her Southwestern Christmas surprise, which has been known to make several herald angels "hark". The elves, busy cleaning up after Rudolph, the red-nosed reindeer, (who has just trampled Frosty, the snowman), are expecting a blue Christmas unless the Arctic pharmacist brings peace on earth. In the midst of all this holiday madness, angels (we have heard) are on high ensuring a white Christmas all around. A gay time was had by all. (Paul J. Williams)
